

Abstract

An existence and uniqueness theorem for solutions in the Banach space l_1 of a nonlinear difference equation is given. The constructive character of the proof of the theorem predicts local asymptotic stability and gives information about the size of the region of attraction near equilibrium points.